The Best Novel of 2015 -- Hands Down!

By Susanne Lakin

From the first page, you will be swept away by this stunning portrayal of a marriage in crisis. Like a spark that grows into a conflagration, Jess's unease about her husband Chet's behavior and words flares into flames of pain and shock as she forces herself to admit the unthinkable.

In the midst of this turmoil, Haley, their teenage daughter, is also fighting to understand herself and her place in her family and the world. Upon learning of her father's selfish betrayals, she runs away and into grave danger. Both mother and daughter abhor conflict and can't find the inner strength to stand up and speak out for what they need and the outrage they feel. But the time has come to stand and face the fire.

Jessica is so much like many women. She loves Chet. She honors her marriage and family. She doesn't want to rock the boat. But what do you do when your boat's been capsized? Jessica has tough decisions to make that will impact not only her but her daughter.

This novel is beautiful. Set in the Yosemite area, the story has layers of symbolism and metaphor. California is on fire, and while fire destroys, it also burns the underbrush to ash so that new life can sprout. Ginny Yttrup parallels the outer and interior dangers--dangers of being scorched and burned. Her characters are thrown into the crucible and face a fire that might destroy them as the landscape around them burns.

If you read only one novel this season, make it Flames. You won't avoid being scorched yourself, but you will be glad for it. There is victory and healing at the end of the journey.

This is a story birthed in love, and I am certain many lives will be ...

By Kimfurd

"What once was, is no longer." (p. 54)

Ginny Yttrup's latest novel, Flames, deals with a tender subject, the complexities of life – seen from multiple angles and multiples generations, as the flames of infidelity burn through a family. Jessica Weaver is a fire archaeologist who preserves the effects of wildfire on all areas of life. When infidelity blazes through her family, she is forced to take a close look at the motivations of her own life choices and examine the steps that brought her to this defining moment.

The desire to preserve her family unscathed is thwarted when her teenage daughter, Haley, also discovers her father's infidelity. She chooses to run from the problem, creating another layer of firestorm that overlies the circumstances facing her parents.

While Haley flees to the wilderness, Jessica flees to her father, and Ted, becomes the lens through which we view the perspective of the parent who shepherds and supports his daughter through a trial not unlike one he walked through in his own marriage decades earlier. The faith and grace displayed through Ted and his wife Cretia, is a poignant reflection of God's grace and mercy to His children no matter what trial they are facing.

This is Ginny Yttrup's first self-published novel, and it was written from a heart's desire to help people take a long hard look at the destructive consequences of careless choices. But, more than that, it is a novel that walks through the scorched earth of the heart and finds hope and healing through the searing flames of infidelity.

The words are rich, and carefully woven together so the reader is able to feel the pain, the terror, the hopelessness and the strength that is born out of such a trial. I've walked this journey in my own life, and I'll confess there were times I just snot-sobbed over my book and had to lay it down and physically grieve through the pain of my own life circumstances. But, once on the other side of this novel, I felt stronger and more purposeful about my future than I've felt in years! SUCH HEALING was found in the pages of this novel for me!! This is a story birthed in love, and I am certain many lives will be saved and changed through reading this novel!

Good Story, but Frustrating to Read

By patrick e bates

"Flames" by Ginny L. Ytrrup

Okay, I confess, ...I've liked Ginny Ytrrup ever since I read "Words". I became a huge fan and devoured her novels as soon as I could. I enjoyed "Invisible", too, but not as much as "Words". Still... For all that devotion, you'll notice that I only gave this novel 4-stars. I had thoughts of rating it only 3-stars. Why?

Ginny Ytrrup seems to be hung up on writing in the first-person. And worse, she has several characters narrating their own parts of the story. Several characters, writing in the first-person, in various parts of the story, makes the story difficult for an easy, enjoyable experience. A first-person account, from only one perspective, is okay, though I'm not a big fan. But from three or more characters? Yes, I followed the story, but it was frustrating. Because of the switch of which-person-narrative, the story didn't flow well as it should have.

"Flames" ultimately was a good, entertaining novel. But while reading it, there was a underlying frustration, a nagging feeling, that I did not overly enjoy. If you can read first-person narratives, from several differing points of view, you might enjoy it. I hope you do. I want the author to be encouraged to continue to write. But I also hope she reads this review and understands my objections to the narrative style.
