Folklore of misogny would probably be a better title for this book. Replete with Victorian stereotypes of women, this book draws on many different traditions from around the world to portray women as simultaneously the 'weaker sex' and the source of all evil. Missing or scarce here are women's voices or traditions. However, this work is an essential starting point if you want to enumerate traditional male attitudes about women.

A lost classic that deserves to be read!

By John Galt

Published in 1905 this is a collection of proverbs and musings by cultures worldwide regarding women. Ranging from Chinese, German, Hindu, Scottish, Arabic, it covers the gamut. Included are quotes from Goethe, Shakespeare, and Elizabeth Barrett Browning among others.

Regarding the 'summary' posted above which states this book is 'misogyny', I close with this quote from the book: "O woman! lovely woman! Nature made thee To temper man; we had been brutes without you. Angels are painted fair to look like you"--
