A must have manual for all Pastors, Missionaries and Lay Leaders

By Jason Kratochvil

This is the definitive book that is a must read for all pastors, missionaries and lay leaders. One of the great aspects of this manual is it's ability to offer priceless information no matter your level or years of ministry work and experience. I had the privilege to train under the leadership of Dr. Mel Brown and experience the teachings of this manual first hand. As a missionary in Nicaragua I can honestly say that this is an invaluable tool. It has helped me to be a better preacher, a better missionary, a better counselor, a better leader, a better listener, a better thinker, a better student, a better husband and father, a more focused worker and a more devoted follower of Christ. This manual has been proven through it's application over years of ministerial training, and is in my opinion guaranteed to help you reach your full potential in ministry when followed. I will be using this manual as I train Nicaraguan Pastors, Missionaries and church Lay Leaders, and encourage you to do the same.

The Minister's Instruction Manual

By Dr. George H. King

The need for this book is far greater than many realize. Many dedicated young people have gone to the mission field straight from Bible College. Some have followed college training by entering an internship program. The programs often mostly involve doing daily chores, with little practical experience, outside of building maintenance. Dr. Brown saw this need and developed an outstanding internship program particularly to prepare missionaries for their ministries. This text was created out of, and for this program with the cooperation of the staff of the Edgewood Baptist Church. Though written as a handbook for the missionary intern, it will prove a great stimulus, and guidebook for any one in the ministry any where.

I have served as a pioneer pastor in USA for several years, and over 50 years as a missionary on the field of Japan. I have trained a number of missionaries both to and from Japan and taught many years in and headed two Bible Colleges, I thought I just about knew it all. But, as I began reading this book, I thought I would just scan through it. However, when I started, it seemed as though I wanted to read each sentence over and over. If I wasn't saying, "Amen", I was thinking, "I wish I had learned this 50 years ago." I rank this book on the caliber of Dale Carnegie's "How to Win Friends and Influence People". Like that book, you read it in short sections, than try to apply what you have read to your daily life and ministry. By all means, Get it!

For the next generation of church leaders!

By John Markum

Having graduated from Bible College, and been in ministry now for over 5 years, it's great to see someone with some much experience and wisdom in Ministry sharing those things with the next generation of church leaders. To all of the 20 or 30 somethings out there in ministry, this book deals with the things they didn't teach you in Bible college. To all those IN seminary now, get this book! To those who teach in Bible Colleges/Seminaries, this manual would be an excellent textbook to your students. This books teaches you how to deal with the real preparation, planning, pains, and pressures of full-time ministry. I wish someone had done this 5 years ago...
